A Cattery's Requirements for the New Home

Please select all that apply:

- The conclusion of a contract and full payment.
- The new cat may not be bred and may need to be altered after arrival.
- If a cat cannot stay with you for some reason, you may have to notify the breeder before finding a new home for them.
- A home visit may be required by breeder.
(If you live far away, ask if a tour via video chat or if by a representative chosen by the breeder is possible.)
- Because cats actually are social animals, a breeder may require that other cats be present or planned in the new home. And if this is the case, they will probably want them to be of a similar age, as well.
- They may want to know if other kinds of pets, such as dogs, live in the new home. Or what to take into consideration if small children are present or planned.
- They may have feeding recommendations, such as to avoid dry food. See above for the connection between pet food and health.**

Considerations regarding the new cat's living area include:

- The space available for the people and pets living there as well as an extra room for introducing animals to each other over time
- Places for the cat to retreat to
- Possibilities to climb
- Possibilities to scratch
- An adequate number of litter boxes should be available
Rule of thumb: = the number of cats + 1. Unscented clay litter with active charcoal for odor control is usually accepted by most cats – though more environmentally friendly options should be tried at least, such as litter made from wood fiber
- Food dishes should not be plastic since it retains odors (rather glass or ceramic)
- The water dish should be located at least 6 feet (2 meters) from the feeding area. A drinking fountain is always nice to have. 🐱

Questions to ensure the cat will receive adequate care:

- The number of hours the cat will be alone per day
- Plans for the cat's care during vacations
- If the cat will have health insurance or if savings available for unexpected illnesses, including costly operations
- If a local vet been chosen and on what basis
- If you agree to carry out any additional vaccinations or procedures, e.g. deworming, if required
